

Task force report criticizes police conduct

By Lynne Countryay

It is a story Canada police forces are spreading nervously: eight (yes, eight) police officers were charged with sexual harassment in the last year, a fact which is not being widely reported in the media.

The report of seven women who provided 120 police forces has prompted a task force to report on the results of the investigation. "I am convinced that the police forces are a very good example of the community," it is a very well-written report.

The task force said there might be a problem in the police forces, but it is not a problem in the police forces, it is a problem in the police forces.

Canadian Forces report only four out of 100,000 officers are a sexual harasser.

The task force has also said of sexual harassment by police officers. The report said that there is a problem in the police forces, but it is not a problem in the police forces.

High school gymnasts vault to Ontario championship

By Pamela Foster

Hundreds of competitive gymnasts and spectators crowded the Camosun College recreation arena gymnasium April 14 and 15 for the Ontario Secondary School Gymnastics Championships.

After about 600 young gymnasts were flying through the air last night as they performed routines in front of 200 spectators, it was time to open the vault final. More than 120 athletes from 15 high school districts across the province took part in the event.

The competition is ground towards high school gymnastics, which is being promoted by the Ontario Gymnastics Federation. The event has already been a success, with many high schoolers taking part in the event. Last night's event was the first of its kind.

The competition featured both individual and team events. The individual events were the vault, the uneven bars, the beam, and the floor exercise. The team events were the vault, the uneven bars, the beam, and the floor exercise.

A 1989 champion was Emily Reid, a 15-year-old from the University of Toronto. She was the only athlete to score a perfect 10 in the vault final.

Another local winner of the event was the University of Toronto's Emily Reid.

Job stats misleading

By Julie Lawrence

Walking through the mass lobby of Union Square, you might have noticed a sign (or signs) stating: 83.1% of college graduates are employed.

For 1988 figures prepared by government services, it is a general rule: statistics are misleading in some ways, but not in others.

For 1988 figures, the percentage of graduates who were employed was 83.1% in 1988, up from 81.1% in 1987. The percentage of graduates who were employed was 83.1% in 1988, up from 81.1% in 1987.

The results are a bit of a surprise, but not a shock. The percentage of graduates who were employed was 83.1% in 1988, up from 81.1% in 1987.

Other factors are at play, too. The percentage of graduates who were employed was 83.1% in 1988, up from 81.1% in 1987.
